A shipping entity was added to provide exact shipping details to the customer through the Sales entity. The customer is given a tracking number, the date the package left the supplier, the estimated time of arrival, and the name of the shipping service used such as UPS, FedEx, or USPS

A discount enttiy was added in which the supplier manages the price of the product and can provide discounts based upon multiple situations. A customer might have made a bulk purchase which in return, the supplier will provide a bulk purchase discount. Another might be the sale of a generally unwanted product where the customer will receive a discount because the supplier is trying to get rid of a specific product
